Q: Showing that a number of the form $\frac{n^3-1}{2}$ cannot be a prime number I was hoping to show that a number of the form $\frac{n^3-1}{2}$ cannot be a prime number by assuming that there is such a prime number. I wanted to have a proper proof by induction, with details. I wrote this down: $n=1$ is a prime number $n=2$ is a prime number $n \geq 3$ if $\frac{n^3-1}{2}$ is a prime number, then $\frac{(n+1)^3-1}{2} = \frac{n^3+3n+2}{2} = \frac{(n+1)(n^2+3n+2)-(n^2+3n+1)}{2}$ is a prime number since it is a product of two prime numbers and $\frac{n+1}{2}$ is an integer and a divisor of n^2+3n+1 , which is a composite number. I don't know how to go further from here. Is there a way to say that the products of two numbers is always a composite number? And is there a way to be more general and say something about $(n+1)$? A: Your claim is valid, but you don't need induction at all. If p is a prime, then p is p
