A: In your loop, you set up the reading of the first row of csv file. When you read the 2nd row of the file, the file pointer will be at the beginning of the 3rd row. If you want to continue to read rows from the end of the file, just add another loop, filepointer.seek(0) while True: row = filepointer.readline() if row == "" or row[0]!="Y" or row[1]!="T" or row[2]!="U" or row[3]!="T" or row[4]!="C" or row[5]!="T" or row[6]!="S": break For the condition row!="" at the end of your loop, you might want to add a count in order to control how many times the loop will run. It is not a good idea to keep re-opening the file. while True: filepointer.seek(0) count = 0 while True: row = filepointer.readline() if row!="" or row[0]!="Y" or row[1]!="T" or row[2]!="U" or row[3]!="T" or row[4]!="C" or row[5]!="T" or row[6]!="S": break else: count = count + 1 if count == 5: break FILE PHOTO: The logo of Uber Technologies is seen on the driver-side mirror of a car in San Francisco, California, U.S. February 14, 2018. We and others have discovered that abnormal proteins containing polyQ peptides form toxic aggregates and play a major role in disease onset and progression. A number of amyloidoses and neurodegenerative disorders are associated with pathogenic proteins containing polyQ stretches. Small molecules that can selectively target these aggregates have been very successful in animal models of polyQ diseases. However, polyQ diseases are highly heterogeneous and not all patients respond to the current therapies. Thus, there is a critical need for the development of novel drugs that can specifically target polyQ proteins. We have designed small molecules that target pathological polyQ aggregates with high
