The 90/90/90 target set out in the UNAIDS/WHO "Package of Essential HIV/AIDS Interventions" of 1998 calls for the diagnosis of 90% of HIV infections, 90% of people living with HIV (PLHIV) receiving antiretroviral therapy and 90% of PLHIV in need of treatment to be treated by 2020. As of 2012, 30.3 million people worldwide are living with HIV, of whom 22.6 million were receiving antiretroviral therapy, although only one in three PLHIV in need of treatment were receiving it. The median CD4+ T-cell count at the time of diagnosis of HIV infection had increased to between 200-250 cells/mm<sup>3</sup>. This paper reviews progress in the field of HIV diagnosis, treatment and prevention, in particular, the impact of diagnostic technologies, access to treatment, adherence and viral suppression. It concludes with an analysis of what needs to be done to reach the 90/90/90 targets.--TEST-- Bug #45731 (Incorrect password verification of encrypted passwords) --SKIPIF--
