

OpenSSH 6.5 introduced ED25529 SSH 014 keys and they should be available on most . The default key size depends on your version of ssh-keygen. If you have sshd configured with OpenSSH in C and you want to set up an SSH key that only works with C, then you can use the following file named "dedicated-key" on your system. In this case, we will use keygen to generate this key. When you run ssh-keygen it creates a file called "dedicated-key". This name does not matter, the main thing is that the file contains a set of SSH keys. Once the file is created, simply run sshd from the command line.
