It depicted a young British woman who was killed in a Paris attack and was given a funeral at the back of the church, which is usually reserved for non-Catholics. The rest of the parishioners, however, ignored her going to the event. This comes on the heels of another article in The Telegraph that reports that there is a Pope Francis circus coming to the nation's capital that one of the ringmasters of the circus is none other than former Godfather's assassin Francesco Rosi. Rosi is said to be one of the top circus performers in the world, so being able to hold a circus event for Pope Francis would be a real coup. He serves on the Pope's artistic council and presides over at the most important Vatican commission that oversees the artistic quality of the Vatican. The two have been pals since they were teenagers in Italy and continue to be so to this day. Rosi even came to visit the pope's mother in Argentina at the time the pope was conceiving him. It's not as though there haven't been circus events at the Vatican before. There was one in 2010, as well as one in 2015 with a different circus clown leading the event. It's not the first circus act at the Vatican. In 2014, circus types were seen out in the St. Peter's Square during Pope Francis's weekly audiences. It's likely that Pope Francis knows of Rosi and has agreed to his circus event. Once again, the article says nothing about Rosi showing the tricks in his circus act. With his circus friends performing in the square, this likely means he's putting on a show for 3e33713323
