
If you are a MAC-address fan, then KeyMACRO is the application that you need. This application takes the MAC address of the device you are using as a input and generates a 32-character long string that will act as your key for the MAC address. Additionally, it allows you to change the characters and their positions in the string, as well as change the length of it. It also provides an option to reverse the order and the combination of the bytes. And last but not least, it also allows you to run the MAC address as a domain name, so you can simply enter it into any URL. If you are constantly frustrated by the fact that the same message pops up every time you log into a particular website, you need to look no further than MacDefender. The MacDefender is a utility that generates a secret URL that will keep the message away. It has a great number of options, including the options of changing the message and its position on the screen, changing its length, as well as the option of replacing certain characters with the ones you deem fit. It also provides an option for you to enter a pattern and then display it whenever you enter a certain URL. With all that being said, it is pretty self-explanatory what MacDefender is all about.

AirDroid Description: AirDroid is a device manager application that helps you manage all of your devices. The app will work with both Android and iOS, as well as with Kindle devices and Samsung smartwatches. In short, you can manage all the devices in one place in a convenient way. If you want to manage your iOS devices, you can use AirDroid to set up and reset your home screen, your mail, texts, alarms and contacts, as well as the Wi-Fi password and encryption keys. And if you are using Android devices, you can manage everything that can be managed using Android devices, such as the contacts, the phone and messages, as well as the Wi-Fi password and the encryption keys. To manage any Kindle device, the application provides you with the means of managing your device by allowing you to reset it, use the voice command to change the current screen or turn off the screen if you are concerned about battery life. Last but not least, the Samsung Gear S3 and Gear S4 smartwatches are also managed using the app. And if that is not enough, you can also manage these devices from a PC or 77a5ca646e
