Recovery is always very important in computer repair, and any problems with the hard drive should not be taken lightly. Many people get their computers repaired at home, but if you are in a big hurry, the easiest option is to take them to the repair shop. However, what if your computer has a very big problem? What if you need to have the hard drive replaced? This is a very common problem because the hard drive is one of the most sensitive components of any computer. Most of us don't think of the hard drive as one of the most critical things in our computers because we have always had a backup or extra hard drive in our desk, and this seems to be the case of the majority of computer users. Do you have a backup hard drive? Backups are an excellent way to secure your valuable data, but we have all encountered the problem that sometimes the backup drive fails, and it is not possible to get it repaired. Or maybe you have lost the backup drive, and you are wondering whether you have any data on it. Now you might be wondering what you should do next? Don't panic! You are in luck! When your backup drive has failed, you can use this hard drive repair software to scan your computer and locate the data on your hard drive. There are many hard drive repair software solutions out there, and this review will take a closer look at one of them. This program has been very popular on its own, and it is easy to see why. This is a quick and easy way to repair hard drive problems. Many other hard drive repair solutions include complicated steps that are time consuming. But not this one! This program is very easy to use, so that anyone can use it. You have to simply connect your hard drive to the computer, then wait a few minutes until the program has completed the repair and scanned the hard drive. When you are done, you will see your files appear on the screen. After you see all your files appear on the screen, you can then take them off of your computer and put them on to your backup drive. Can this program locate lost files? iData RAW Partition Recovery will scan the hard drive and locate files that are missing on your computer. It will also create a list of the files that it finds, and if you like, you can save the list to a text file so that you can print it out. This program is very easy to use, so if

I need to stop a running service. The problem is that I don't know which is the service that is running. All I know is that this service is started automatically. How can I find out which service started that, and how to stop it? A: You can do this with pkill. Try: sudo pkill -f service_name_goes_here A: If your service is started with systemctl then you can also use systemctl to stop it. e.g. sudo systemctl stop Q: regex matching with newline characters I am trying to write a regex that only matches if there is a newline character at the end of the line. Here's a test case (input = "abcd defg abcd abcd ") I'm trying to use `^[r]$` This works fine for matching strings that end with a newline, but doesn't work for strings that end with a carriage return. The regex does not match "abcd ". How do I write a regex that does not allow newline characters to be omitted from the end of the string? A: As you are not actually interested in the values of the strings but only in the last one, you can use a back reference in your regex. `(?s)(?!.[r].$)[^r]$` Demo: Since the only condition for the end of the line
