-Generate a CS3 style icon, web 2.0 style icon, icons for Flash and animation...PKC, a protein kinase C. Protein kinase C is a key enzyme that plays important roles in signal transduction. It acts as a molecular switch that is activated in response to extracellular signals, and is down-regulated by a variety of mechanisms. The regulation of protein kinase C is a complicated process that involves phosphorylation, protein-protein interaction, and enzymatic activity. The activation of protein kinase C is a key event in cellular signal transduction, and the deactivation of protein kinase C is important in the regulation of cell proliferation. A number of growth factors and other extracellular factors are known to activate protein kinase C, but the activation mechanism is not fully understood. In contrast, there are many studies that have shown that protein kinase C is down-regulated by some stress-responsive factors. Therefore, protein kinase C is an attractive target for the treatment of various diseases..0DASP50.015.075.0NA1111T cell leukemia2.05.05.050.0NA210MLD2.05.05.0100.0NA310MLD2.05.05.0100.0NA411Lymphoma3.0
